RUTH LOSES AGAIN IN FIGHT FOR LIFE

New York, Jan. 6.—(AP)—Hope of Mrs. Ruth Snyder for postponement of the date of her execution on January 12 was apparently dashed again today when it was announced that arguments on a motion for a jury trial in the suit brought against her by the Prudential Life Insurance company was adjourned until January 13.

Edgar Hazleton, of Mrs. Snyder's counsel, made the application for a jury trial and it was considered possible that the date of Mrs. Snyder's execution might be postponed in the event that Justice Levy ruled that she would be needed as a witness.

WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICES CLOSE THURSDAY NIGHT

The Rev. Earl J. Bowman Delivers Final Sermon On "Christ In The World."

The union week of prayer services conducted by the Protestant churches of Gettysburg four evenings this week were concluded Thursday evening. The Rev. Earl J. Bowman, pastor of the St. James' Lutheran church, delivered the sermon on the topic, "Christ in the World." The services have been held in the Trinity Reformed church.

This evening special services will be held in each of the churches united in the general observance.

The Rev. Mr. Bowman took his text from John 3:16 and 17. He said in part:

"The world which is used in different ways in the Bible. For our purpose and theme we take it to mean the entire race of mankind, all human beings of all nations.

"The attitude of Christ to the world is one of sympathy and love.

"This is shown by his life and by his teachings. From his birth to his death Christ showed in his life that he had come for all the world. Again and again he taught men to take a world view of the Kingdom of God. His Kingdom was to have no racial or geographical boundaries. He wanted to establish the system of life wherein the knowledge of God should cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

"His purpose in all this was to save the world. God sent His son because He loved the world. Christ came not to condemn the world but that the world through him might be saved.

"How far has this purpose been realized? Only in part. One-third of the world is Christian. Great nations in the East are without Christ. And even in lands where Christ and his gospel are known vast numbers are without him.

"The World War came upon the world through the lands where the Gospel is known. Have we in America really caught the spirit of the Prince of Peace? Is he dominant in the lives of our nations?

"Christ wants our industrial and economic life, our home and social life, our educational and political life, our national and international life Christianized. Many phases of it are yet without Christ.

"When we entered the war in 16 days 10,000,000 men were informed as to their duty, time and place of registration for military service. It is 1900 years since Christ issued an order to evangelize the world and yet it is not done. The church is late.

"We must put Christ in a central place in our home life, our educational life, our church life and our individual life.

"We need today a new sense of our responsibility under God and a mighty strengthening of our spiritual life, so that we may each contribute one strong Christian life to God's program for the world."

67 HUNTERS AND 14,500 DEER ARE KILLED IN 1927

3,300,000 Rabbits Slain In State During Past Hunting Season, Reports Show.

Pennsylvania hunters during the past season bagged more deer than in any other year, according to preliminary reports received by the state game commission. There were about 14,500 deer killed or approximately 3000 more than in 1926.

Twenty-five elk were killed, the greatest number since an open season was declared on these animals several years ago. There were 319 bear shot, compared with 669 in 1926, the decrease being assigned to early hibernation of the animals.

Combined with other figures on game killed, it was announced that the past season has been one of the best on record.

Sixty-Seven Fatalities

Estimates on the kill of other animals and birds were: Rabbits, 3,300,000, compared with 2,700,000 in 1926; squirrel, 1,200,000, about the same as in the 1926 season; raccoon, 20,000, a decrease of about 50 per cent, the falling off being ascribed to an increasing scarcity of the animals; wild turkey, 9500, on which there was a closed season in 1926; ruffed grouse, 300,000, about the same as in 1926; ringneck pheasant, 180,000, an increase of approximately 100 per cent; bobwhite quail, 200,000, an increase of more than 40,000, and woodcock, 40,000, a decrease of about 20,000, due to the season which was shortened in 1927 by one month.

There were sixty-seven fatal accidents among hunters, compared with forty-seven in 1926, reports to the commission disclosed. Non-fatal accidents totaled 317, compared with 244 last year. The majority of the accidents occurred during the small game season. John B. Truman, executive secretary, said. He declared that he was unable to explain this condition unless it was due to a concentration of hunters, on account of the short season on some game, and increasing carelessness in the handling of firearms.

$200,000 To Spend

The commission visited Governor Fisher and informed him that it would have approximately $200,000 to spend during the year, ending May 31, next, for the purchase of game refuges and public hunting grounds. The commission has now about 61,000 acres of land under contract and estimates that the money which would be available for this purchase during the present biennium would approximate $400,000, permitting the purchase of more than 100,000 acres during the two-year period.

Ross L. Leffer, of McKeesport, was elected president of the commission, and Jared M. B. Reis, New Castle, vice president. John B. Truman was re-elected executive secretary.

MAN IS FREED OF FORGERY CHARGE

Edward Cooper Is Released After Trial, Due To Lack Of Evidence.

A charge of forgery against Edward Cooper, of New York, was dismissed by Justice J. L. Hill, Thursday afternoon, for lack of evidence.

Cooper today said he was in New York on October 27, although he admitted being here some time before. He said he knew Swain and Cromer, the latter only casually, and emphatically denied having signed Cromer's name to a note.

Cooper was brought to Gettysburg from New York several days ago.

Robert H. Wilson, was named Thursday by Congressman Franklin Menges, of the York-Adams district, to be acting postmaster at Littlestown, succeeding E. B. Collins, the incumbent, whose term expires Sunday.

The congressman has asked the civil service commission to hold an examination in order to obtain a list of eligibles for the appointment to the regular term. The day for filing applications for the examination has been fixed as January 17.

Mr. Wilson, who served a term in the state legislature, having been elected in 1905, was in the general merchandising business in Littlestown for twenty-five years. BELIEVE MARINES INSTRUCT REBELS

Two Deserters Are Thought to Have Taught Sandino's Army Methods of Attack.

Washington, Jan. 6.—(AP)—Two deserters from the United States marines captured by the rebel general Sandino as they sought to escape from the Nicaraguan war zone are believed by marine officers in Nicaragua to have turned their military training to account by helping in the instruction of the rebel troops.

An unofficial report relayed from the front to marine corps headquarters here said it was believed that the two men agreed to teach Sandino's soldiers how to shoot under a threat that they themselves would go before a rebel firing squad if they refused.

Marine officers said today they had no proof beyond the report which had come to them from officers in Nicaragua. They pointed out that in their recent attacks on American forces the Sandino troops had shown unusually familiarity with marine corps methods.

It was noted that recent reports from Nicaragua had emphasized that Sandino apparently was receiving aid of an unusual nature and that the morale of his troops had been advanced.

Harassing methods have also been adopted by the Nicaraguans. One favorite method is to have a trumpet approach the American lines and blow the marine call "To Arms" turning the men out from their quarters ready for attack.

INDICT HICKMAN IN NEW MURDER

Youthful Slayer Pleads Not Guilty to Slaying of Drug- gist During Holdup.

Los Angeles, Jan. 5.—William Edward Hickman and his former bandit pal, Welby Hunt, 16, pleaded not guilty late yesterday when arraigned on an indictment charging them with the murder of Ley Thoms, suburban druggist, in a holdup about a year ago. In a second plea, Hickman fell back upon the same insanity defense with which he met the charge that he kidnapped and mutilated Marian Parker. The pleas bear admission of guilt in both cases making the state of his mentality the sole issue.

Judge Carlos Hardy set Wednesday, February 1, as the date for the trial on the second murder indictment. Hickman goes to trial on January 25 for the Parker girl crimes.

BOX CARS PULLED BY YOKE OF OXEN

Old Style Method of Locomotion Used in Texas Factory; Ousts Engines.

Navasota, Tex.—(AP)—Oxen take the place of steam switching engines on the railroad sidetracks at an industrial plant here.

Six or eight animals pull loads of 50 to 100 tons, apparently with little effort, and they have been found to supply the best and least expensive motive power available under existing conditions.

When H. Schumaker established here in 1873 the first cottonseed oil mill in the southwest, there were no railroads in the vicinity. Oxen hauled the seed to the mill and the oil to market.

When the railroad came and brought switch tracks, it was found that long delays and heavy expenses resulted from waiting for the locomotive to do the switching after it pulled its string of box cars into town once or twice a day. So the oxen were tried for moving empty and loaded cars to and from the loading platforms at the cotton seed mill. They did the work satisfactorily, and always were on hand when a car was to be moved.

So today the motive power of centuries ago is linked with industry of the twentieth century. Jim Brown, a quiet, friendly old negro, and his five yoke of oxen are an institution of Navasota.

J. J. Piper, superintendent at the mill, says the beasts are the most economical power he can find. Large Texas steers with long horns are used. The animals are fed cottonseed meal and become strong and sleek. Despite their heavy work they grow fat, and must be sold for slaughter after serving in the yoke a year or two.

Six oxen pull more than 200,000 pounds on the rails. One yoke, recently disposed of, handled a box car alone. These two steers weighed 2,200 pounds each.

Although appearing to be stolid beasts, the oxen are sensitive and occasionally run away. Their proper handling requires a person of the right temperament, and Jim Brown is the man.

For almost 40 years, he has been driving the oxen, without harness. The only rein is a rope tied to the horns of one of the steers.

"How do you get along so well with the oxen?" Jim was asked. "I treat 'em like I does my children—with love," he answered.

Modernist Composers Called Opportunists By Music Authority

Paris.—(AP)—The desire to "make a hit" seriously damages the work of many young musical composers of this generation, believes Paul Dukas, noted composer who is reported a likely successor to Charles Widor as professor of composition at the conservatory here.

"Living in an age which does not permit wasting time," says M. Dukas, "many of our young people become opportunists. They make success their goal, not realizing that artists should have no goal but faithful service of their muse."

Another source of trouble arises from following "temporary fashions" which, Dukas declares, will be forgotten in ten years. "Young artists of today are caught between two pitfalls, old-fashionedness and ultra-modernism, but they do not seem to realize that the latter is as dangerous as the former."

GELATIN NOT A MEAT

Gelatin is a protein, but it lacks certain amino acids found in other proteins, particularly those essential to normal growth and development. It is therefore called an incomplete protein and does not take the place of meat. It is, however, a useful article of food in a diet including other proteins from well diversified sources and is especially useful as a supplement to milk.

LINDBERGH AVOIDS SCENE OF BATTLE

Deviates From Short Route in Reaching Managua, Capital of Nicaragua.

Managua, Nicaragua, Jan. 6.—In holiday attire, the streets decorated with American and Nicaraguan flags and banners of welcome, with palms marking the route from the Managua airport to the presidential palace, Managua greeted Col. Charles A. Lindbergh yesterday.

He left Tegucigalpa, Honduras, at 12:36 New York time and at 3:30 he was rolling across the field here while the huge crowd yelled madly. He had flown out of his direct route to go by way of Leon and avoid by thirty miles or so the scene of the fighting between Nicaraguans and United States Marines.

This detour made the ambassador of good will's journey considerably longer, although he only flew over Leon without stopping.

BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN BY ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.
"BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN," starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. pictorialization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Myra Martin, secretary to Leonard Gilbert, a prominent divorce lawyer, to whom she is engaged, has taken care of her younger sister, Helene, since their mother's death. In Myra's office, Helene meets Huntley Sheldon, a notorious man about town whose wife, Nina, is employing Gilbert to handle her fourth attempt at divorcing Sheldon. Myra warns her sister against the man but Helene, although interested in Ralph Naylor, is fascinated by Sheldon. Sheldon asks Helene to his hunting lodge, but Myra, discovering the invitation, forbids her sister to go. Helene refuses to obey and Myra locks her in her room.

Myra paced the floor like an angry tiger in a cage. Helene's poundings and screamings made her taut nerves almost snap. She tried to think clearly, to see her way. Then, suddenly, she began to have another idea. It came almost in a flash. If she could carry it out—what an idea! She began to smile to herself, pacing there. Helene's screams were growing fainter. The child was probably becoming tired by her tantrum. But she was safe there—there was no possible chance for her escape now. Myra rattled the two keys in her pockets and began to smile. She would play a game with Mr. Huntley Sheldon herself. She would show him that there was someone who could not be influenced by his sleazy, cheap talk. With a light step, and a gurgle of laughter, Myra turned to her own room. She surveyed herself in the mirror. Yes, that was about the proper costume—only the shoes were wrong, the tie and the make-up. But she would soon remedy that. She hunted about in her closet until she located a dowdy pair of brogues. She took off the trim slippers she had been wearing and laced up the walking oxfords. They made her feet look fairly large, and they were old enough to be almost shabby. Then she took off her gait and began replacing it by an older one—one that had not seen the tailors for some little time.

Finally she sat down before her mirror and began removing the powder from her face. She dabbed on cleansing cream, then rubbed it off and then rubbed in cold cream. Finally her face began to gleam in the soft lights. She wiped most all the cream away and then discovered that she looked just "shiny." There, that was splendid. She looked more closely at herself in the mirror and nodded an approval.

Then she searched in her dressing table and brought forth a colorless, gray tie that she had always hated. She had bought it once, when she was in a hurry, and she had scarcely ever used it. It was too toneless, altogether, with her brown hair and her delicate coloring. That would do, splendidly. She pulled the tie about until it assumed a sort of out-of-shape appearance, and then she put it on, tying it slightly crooked. And then she fumbled around until she found a case, and from it she took a pair of heavy, tortoise shell rimmed glasses that she used for reading when her eyes felt tired. She laid them on the table before her.

Her hair she let down, shook it out, and began pulling it back and twisting it into an uncomfortable knot. She adjusted the eyeglasses and stared at herself. The strangest looking creature she had ever seen stared back at her from the mirror. She was a caricature indeed. A caricature, not of herself, but of a prim, staid woman of the type always interesting herself in some other person's business. She could have been almost any kind of a worker who took herself, her business and the world seriously.

She thrust a gray, unbecoming felt hat on her head and pulled it low over her eyes. That should do the trick. Myra laughed to herself again. Then she went around the corner to the garage and got out her small car, stepped in and took the wheel.

CHAPTER VI
At Seven Oaks a man in informal evening clothes stood surveying the spacious room about him. A log fire burned low in the big, stone chimney place. Overhead, great brown, smoke-stained beams gleamed hazily in the soft light. Over balcony railings that marked the passageway to the upper-floor rooms hung Indian blankets, their vivid colors subdued in the dimness of the evening. Heavy portieres were pulled across the windows, shutting off the world outside, where stars blinked in a deep, moonless night.

"You have everything ready, as I told you, Ito?" Huntley Sheldon turned to a Japanese boy who was putting the finishing touches to a large tray on which rested a decanter, two liqueur glasses, and a large, carved cigarette box.

"Yes, sir," Ito spoke, slowly in his meticulous, Japanese way, only he changed almost all the "I"s to "Y"s. "Y" being leady, Ica, glasses, Yoo wood, ev'ning. My make ev'ning."

"Very good, Ito. Now you understand that you're to retire—make yourself very scarce, see?"

The Jap grinned. "Yes, sir, my see. My know—Come back time for breakfast, yes?"

"That's right. Now clear out. I can find everything I want, myself."

"Velly good, My go." Ito started towards the door, but halted instantly at the sound of Sheldon's voice.

"O, by the way, Ito," Sheldon was saying, "I wish you'd disconnect the telephone as you leave. I shan't want to be bothered by any calls."

"Yes, sir. Velly good." Ito glided noiselessly from the room, closing the door carefully behind his padded heels.

Sheldon glanced at his watch. Eight-thirty. Plenty of time. He picked up a poker and leisurely stirred the fire. Tiny sparks went flying up and out into the night. The fire flared up, grew brighter. Shadows danced grotesquely, palpitating like breathing monsters. The room leaped in greater lightness. Sheldon sat down before the fireplace and lit a cigarette, drawing long breaths of blue-white smoke and watching them trail lazily out again.

Michel should be able to make good time on a night like this. It was fine for driving. Almost wished he'd gone himself. But that would have been so much of a nuisance. No, better to have stayed here and have all arrangements made so that everything was well understood and properly attended to. It might be a little hard to walk into the room with a girl like Helene and try to explain to Ito that he was to do the disappearing act. No, things were a lot better as they were.

Sheldon got up slowly and went over to the big buffet and mixed himself a whisky-soda. Might as well be comfortable while he waited. He drifted back to the fire, glass in hand, and stared into the redness of the burning logs. He wasn't minding waiting, in the least. Rather lent a flavor to any affair. So, of an anticipatory glamour to it. And he never had to wait for anyone—and no one ever disappointed him. He was just the sort of person that people didn't disappoint. And he was never in a hurry. He knew that if he waited long enough, he could always get what he wanted. But he never bothered waiting. There were too many things to occupy him, without that.

What should he tell Helene about the other people not being there. O, pass it off in some way. Explain that they had been called out of town—that he couldn't get the ones he had wanted at the last moment, and rather than have any others he had thought that the two of them could have a much nicer little party just all alone. He could usually handle women, and the words he used had little to do with the effect he created. It would all work out all right.

With all his reflections, however, there was one thing that Huntley Sheldon could not, fortunately or unfortunately, see. And that was the little car that went speeding past his own, just as his car neared the town. For a few seconds the two headlights had glared at each other, as though scenting mischief, and then they had been lowered, and the two cars passed whizzing alongside each other a moment and then blurring foggly into the night. The little car looked as though it were "hell bent for heaven," but the girl behind the wheel didn't look as though she were nearing any haven of peacefulness.

"OUR LITTLE CORNER"

No. 1	January 6, 1928.	Vol. 1
Mr. Herbert L. Grimm, down at The "Times" office says everybody thinks he knows how to run a newspaper, and we're no exception to that rule.	Also, we may decide to write poetry or high brow editorials.	what a wonderful establishment we have here.
But we can't afford a newspaper of our own. Besides, we're too busy with the hardware business.	But we'll at least try to be interesting and we hope you'll watch for "Our Little Corner" each week.	In other words, we want to make this space of some service to you, and we wish you'd advise us from week to week—criticise or commend, as you think we deserve. We'll need your help and "moral support."
So we have arranged for this little corner in The "Times" and we're going to devote it to the news of our business.	There are lots of things around our place of business that we'd like to tell you about from time to time. New merchandise arriving. New ideas. Comments from customers. Things that we believe would interest you a lot more than if we tried to tell you all the time about	And while we're getting "Our Little Corner" ready each week, just remember that we're also going to give you the best hardware service we know how to deliver.
We may not talk about hardware all the time. Maybe some of you Gettysburg folks may get your names into our "newspaper" occasionally.	Gettysburg Department Store	That's the big aim of this store, always.

Out of the Past

Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal.

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

Local Miscellany.—John A. Mumper, formerly of Everett, Pennsylvania, has taken personal charge of the Mumper studio, Baltimore street, which he recently purchased.

H. J. Brinkerhoff is having a store room installed in his property on Baltimore street.

A slight chimney fire occurred at the home of Harry T. Schriver, East Middle street, Friday morning.

Wedding Bells.—Zinn—Miller.—A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. L. D. Miller, Baltimore street, at 6:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, when her daughter, Miss Effie, became the bride of John Zinn. The home was decorated in a color scheme of green and white, harmonizing very effectively with candlelight, by which the nuptials were held. A wedding supper followed the ceremony.

Before the ceremony Mrs. R. E. Zinn sang "O Promise Me." The wedding march was played by Miss Reba Miller. The ring ceremony was used and the ceremony was performed by Rev. J. B. Baker. The bride and groom were unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Zinn left Thursday morning for Baltimore, where Mr. Zinn is a student in the Chemistry Department of Johns Hopkins university. He is a graduate of the Gettysburg high school, Gettysburg college, and a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. The bride is a graduate of the same institutions. For the past four years she has been teaching school in New Oxford and Littlestown.

Mr. and Mrs. Zinn are among Gettysburg's most popular young people and have the good wishes of a large circle of friends.

Knouse—Cluck.—Miss Ruth Knouse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Knouse, of Highland township, and Calvin A. Cluck, of McKnightstown, were married at the bride's home at noon Christmas Day by Rev. Charles Dalzell.

Swope—Cramer.—Harry E. Swope, of Gettysburg, and Miss Rebecca B. Cramer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Cramer, of McSherrystown, were married in Harrisburg on December 28th by Rev. Thomas Johnson, of the Catholic Cathedral. The bride left her home on Friday for a visit to Gettysburg and word was received the same day of their marriage in Harrisburg, coming as a great surprise to their friends. The couple will reside in Gettysburg.

Goodermuth—Reever.—At the Methodist parsonage in York Springs on Saturday, December 21, Clayton A. Goodermuth, of this place, and Miss Margaret Reever, York Springs, were united in marriage by Rev. A. C. Logan.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BETTER AND BETTER

I AM convinced that the world is growing better and better—and I am of the opinion that it is a far more intelligent world than ever before. Of course this doesn't give encouragement to a certain type of "reformers" who want folks to think that though things have changed, they have changed for the worse.

We hear so much about the bitterness of other countries toward America, but the fact is that never before were all countries working so closer harmony, and with better understanding, with America.

When Edward Everett Hale wrote his famous classic, "The Man Without a Country," there were many states so loosely loyal to the Nation that some of them gave vent to expressions amounting to hardly less than treason, and so that gripping story was written. Its lesson went home.

It only needed such magnificent characters as Lee and Grant at Appomattox, the Spanish War, and the World War, to convince the world that America was a nation.

People of every nation are more tolerant than ever before.

We may never have a League of Nations, as outlined by Woodrow Wilson, but the germ of that ideal will link the thought and aspiration of the world into many a League of Minds. It is a certain fact that if each of us joined a League of Sense and did our honest part to serve well that things would trot along with greater smoothness and dispatch.

To this writer's notion, the life Lindbergh is presenting to the consideration of the world one of the finest examples in all history. Better than any other picture in American life, he typifies the real thought and desires of all, presenting by his fine courage, sterling character and simplicity of conduct, a mirror of America's sincere desire for peace and understanding toward all other Nations.

From country to country this young man goes alone, at his own expense, creating a better feeling; and by this method washing out the hearts of millions of people, stained and embittered by the crime of selfishness and war.

Infinitely finer than sending a battle fleet around the world, is it not?

POOR SALESMANSHIP

I recognize the solemn fact That salesmanship is partly tact And industry and steam, That every energetic man Must catch his prospect when he can By any plan or scheme. A selling talk, though well rehearsed, Requires, of course, a hearer first.

I do not mind it in the least When one dressed like a parish priest Gets in to sell me books; Nor am I very sorely grieved When comes another I've believed A banker, from his looks, Who proves to be a gentleman With stocks to sell me if he can.

But when upon the telephone A man won't make his business known To save his time and mine, But vows the news he has to give Is urgent and imperative, And gets me on the line; Then starts of certain bonds to tell, With me that boy won't finish well.

Who lies to get me to the 'phone Will never make his story known, His stocks I'd never buy. He gets me from my desk to tell Me what it is he has to sell And does it with a lie! If what he had would pay me ten For one I wouldn't buy it then!

Why Every User becomes a Friend
"Never has any other cough medicine acted so quickly and satisfactorily as Foley's Honey and Tar Compound; and it gives complete satisfaction to friends who use it on my recommendation," says J. D. McComb, Toledo, Ohio. "It spreads a healing, soothing coating in an irritated inflamed throat, stops coughing, raises phlegm easily. No opiates to cause constipation, no chloroform, no 'dope.' You take no chances with cough or cold when you buy Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Ask for it. People's Drug Store—adv.

"Yes, I'm going to peek into the school house again," said Danny Fox to himself, as through the forest he trotted. By and by he came to the little building in which Professor Jim Crow taught the little people in Rabbit land. The prize contest was still on, and as the old fox cautiously peeped through the window, he saw the little rabbit standing up his desk.

"What's he saying, I wonder?" thought the old fox, as he pressed his ear close to a knot hole. The next minute he heard the little bunny say, in answer to a question from Professor Jim Crow, "I think the most wonderful part of a duck is his bill."

"Please explain," said Professor Jim Crow, solemnly.
"Well, it's because inside there are little nerves to tell the duck what is good and what is not good to eat. You know," went on the little rabbit, "a duck gets most of its food under water and in the mud; it can't see what it takes up in its bill. But its bill is fitted with little nerves that tell what is good to eat, and the rest is allowed to slip out between a row of little things that look something like teeth on the inside of the bill."

"Well, you're a bright little bunny," cawed the old Crow, delighted that the little rabbit knew so much. "I'll put a star in front of your name. Yes, that makes three stars for you so far."

"Thank you," cried the little bunny.

"Good enough," murmured Danny Fox, on hearing that. "Good for you, Professor Jim Crow. I may be able to take the little silver watch home to-night. Mrs. Fox will then forgive me if I bring no dinner with me," and lifting his head just a little, he peeped through the window. At that very moment Mr. Merry Sun sent a shaft of light to glitter on the little silver watch that hung on the wall behind the old crow's desk. Goodness me, how the silver case sparkled! Every little heart went pitter patter at the thought of winning that pretty silver watch.

"It certainly is a beauty," sighed Danny Fox. "My goodness, I can't see how the little rabbit can lose it. No, I don't. He knows more than all the school put together." Just then Professor Jim Crow rapped on the

APPLE "BETTY" IS POPULAR

Apple betty and other fruit "betty's" are popular with the family and easy to prepare. Mix soft bread crumbs from the center of the loaf with enough melted butter to moisten, and place them in alternate layers in the baking dish with fruit, spice and sugar. Serve hot or cold, with or without cream, or with hard sauce or custard.

If a woman cannot get all of her husband's money any other way she can collect it in the form of alimony.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear father, Adam R. Bream, who departed this life one year ago today, January 6.

One year ago our father died, Oh, sad that year has been, And we who linger only know How much we lost one year ago.

Precious father, thou hast left us, Left us, yes, forever more, But we hope to meet our loved one On that bright and happy shore.

In sadness we all miss you, When the family gathers home, There's always one place vacant, That's ever sad and lone.

Lord, give us strength our loss to bear, And lead us in the heavenly way, Oh, may we meet our father there In realms of endless day.

A little while and we'll understand Just why it was that death's cold, icy hand Clashed in its cold embrace Another loved one.

Robbed our home of father's love so sweet, Turned joy to sorrow And caused the tears of bitterness to fall like rain, A little while and then we'll understand.

The Family.
